

ASKS SOUTHERN ROAD IN HANDS OF A RECEIVER

Bondholders Claim Interurban Line Defaults on Payment of Six Months' Interest.

Another chapter in the litigation which has involved the Rock Island Southern was opened in the circuit court in Galesburg yesterday when Attorneys George C. Gale and Roy Marsh for the bondholders, sought leave of Judge Thompson to file a supplemental bill asking for the appointment of a receiver.

The bill charged that the company failed to meet the payments of interest for the six months from Jan. 1 to June 30 of this year and for that reason a receivership is asked.

Hearing on the original bill, asking the appointment of a receiver on the ground that the interests of the bondholders were jeopardized by the conditions surrounding the operating and maintenance of the road, was had before Master in Chancery John H. Lewis, Jr., some months ago. The evidence in the case was voluminous and the record was but recently completed. The master now has this branch of the case under advisement. The new action, however, asks for the appointment of a receiver on a different ground namely the default of payment of interests on the bonds.

Judge Thompson indicated that he would not grant leave to file the bill until the Walsh Bros. were notified and present in court and the matter was put over until Monday morning to give the defendants an opportunity to be present.

SHE WAS INNOCENT!

Policemen whose sense of propriety was shocked by the appearance of Mrs. Anna Goldman of Coney Island, on Ocean Parkway, sitting in a bathing suit under a skirt and sweater, had a hot time of it in Coney Island court where she was arraigned before Magistrate Giesmar, charged with violation of the park ordinance. This ordinance forbids any one to walk along Ocean Parkway in other than street attire.

The defendant said that "Patrolmen Simmons and Papp insisted on lifting her skirt to see whether she had a bathing suit on."

"You had no business to see if she had a bathing suit on," said the magistrate. "If she did, under her sweater and skirt, she had a right to go anywhere she pleased. If she wanted to go shopping in such a costume she had a right to do so. I do not see where she violated the law in going bathing from Ocean Parkway and I do not see what right you police had to stop her."

Magistrate Giesmar then found Mrs. Goldman not guilty and dismissed the case.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

—6V DAISY DEAN—

The John Emerson-Anita Loos pictures which have been popular wherever pictures are shown have now become a family affair because Miss Loos decided to join the rank and file of June brides and she decided that John would make a nice young woman was married in her early youth. She lived with her husband three days and it has taken her three years to untangle her matrimonial alliance with him. And when she finally won her freedom she declared she would never marry again. But you can not always say the word of that little fellow cupid, and before she realized she had consented to marry her co-worker.

And now we are wondering if the Emerson-Loos combination will be to the screen what the Hattons are to the stage. The Hattons, who are a happily wedded couple, have produced such farces as "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," and "The Great Lover," and many other successes. The Emerson-Loos family have written many of Fairbanks' pictures—"The Americano," "Wild and Woolly," "Down to Earth," "In Again, Out Again" and a score of others.

John Emerson is a native of Sandusky, Ohio. He met Miss Loos in her native California and the two signed a contract to work together. Their last contract to "love, honor and obey" was made at the country estate of Norma Talmadge and her husband, Joseph Schenck. The Schencks gave a wedding breakfast and all the trimmings that go with a regular matrimonial union to the happy couple.

URGENT PURCHASE OF COAL EARLY

Nation Will Again Face Famine This Winter Unless Ordering Is Done This Summer.

Unless Rock Island consumers apply a little pep to their coal buying in the next several months, there may be another serious coal famine, with all its rigors, next winter.

At present about 30 per cent of the consumers of the tri-cities are stocked up on coal. The 70 per cent which remains must be urged, according to bulletins of transportation companies, to commence their ordering immediately, and not wait until the weather becomes too cold. If too much time is spent thinking it over the railroads will not be able to handle the increased demands of coal transportation, and a general shortage will be the result. Not only is the situation developing in the tri-cities and in the middle west, but all over the country.

This fact is not nearly so generally recognized by the buying public as it should be. Former Fuel Commissioner Charles Webster recently said: "There is need to buy coal now just as there was last year and two years ago. Every winter sees a shortage of coal, owing to the negligence of the consumer in not buying early. It is physically impossible for the railroads to transport coal when everybody wants it at the same time. I am confident coal will be no lower in price, but will probably be higher."

To go back to the day when George Beban was not famous—if that is not taxing your powers of recollection too much—there was in San Francisco a place called Platts hall. It was here on the occasion of an exhibition given by the combined schools of San Francisco, that Mr. Beban at the tender age of 7, faced his first audience, singing in an astonishingly big baritone voice "Flower from My Angel Mother's Grave." First prize in the singing class was awarded the young entertainer—and the seed of ambition was sown! Fortune was this for the world at large, but most unfortunate for the peace of mind of father. Now father had other plans for his son. He believed that only in the cloak of grand opera could dignity walk behind the footlights; but George had a determination, and some plans all his own; and, while his great ambition only smoldered for the next few years, it burst suddenly into flame again when George was 14—by way of a surreptitious engagement at the Vienna gardens. Here, under nom-de-chanson of "George Dinks," he was heralded as the wonderful boy baritone of California. But father got next, interviewed the manager, and George went out! . . . dismissed in disgrace as N. G. with never an explanation.

Never suspecting his father's interference, and heartbroken by the belief that his voice was at fault, after the Vienna gardens escapade George turned to the drama for solace. He found it. His fame needs no chronicling here. How he became one of the most noted character actors of the stage and one of the most magnetic personalities of the screen is today common information, and now he has surpassed all his stage and screen achievements in his latest photoplay, "Hearts of Men," which is presented by Hiram Abrams at the Majestic theatre tonight.

BIRDS FISHING FOR YOU.

Do you like to fish? In Japan they have the birds do it for them to a great extent. The custom of having sea birds catch fish is practiced widely, particularly on the Nagara River in the province of Owari. In some parts of China birds are used in the same way. The cornucopia work in teams and once caught and trained will work well for twenty years. The fishing always is at night by torch light, says the American Forestry magazine of Washington, D. C. Corda are tied around the birds and they are led over the side of the boat a dozen at a time. The torches attract the fish and then the fisherman is the busiest man in the world for he has to work fast. The average is about 150 fish per hour per bird. They work for three hours at a time.
